Growth By Design in a Mobile, Social World

Bijan Sabet, General Partner, Spark Capital

Erick Schonfeld, Executive Producer, DEMO

Some of the biggest mobile and social platforms of the past decade create their own traction by becoming movements among consumers. Marketers and executives trying to reach large audiences in these new environments need to understand these platforms. As an early investor in companies including Twitter, Tumblr, Foursquare, and StackExchange, venture capitalist Bijan Sabet has seen these growth dynamics at work first-hand. He will discuss the behaviors that are native to these platforms, how good product design can win big markets, and which areas he will invest in next.

Bitcoin and Beyond

Jeremy Allaire, Founder, Chairman & Chief Executive Officer, Circle

Erick Schonfeld, Executive Producer, DEMO

Bitcoin could be to finance what the internet was to information. Serial entrepreneur Jeremy Allaire (former CEO and founder of Brightcove) is now taking the plunge into finance with his new startup, Circle, which recently raised $50 million from Goldman Sachs and IDG Capital Partners. Circle is building a new consumer finance company with radically different unit economics, leveraging mobile and social trends to drive global adoption. This deep dive into one entrepreneur's journey will shed light on a phenomenon we all need to better understand.

The Next Billion-Dollar Startup

Anand Sanwal, CEO/Co-Founder, CB Insights

Startups with billion-dollar valuations used to be so rare they were called unicorns. But now there are so many private company unicorns—more than 110 worth a total of over $400 billion at last count—that they seem commonplace. Anand Sanwal keeps track of them all at CB Insights. He will share the latest data on startup valuations, how fast the billion-dollar startup club is growing, and which startups might fill its ranks next.

The Rise Of The Private IPO

Frederic Kerrest, Chief Operating Officer & Co-Founder, Okta

Dan Primack, Senior Editor, Fortune.com

More and more growth companies are pushing off IPOs as long as they can and raising massive rounds in the private markets instead. It is not unusual to see companies raise mega-rounds that previously would have only been possible through an IPO. These "private IPOs" are the new normal. Why are they happening and what does it mean for the companies involved, their investors and their customers?
